

COMMUTERS HAD TO WALK.

Erie Engine Jumped the Track in Yards and Passengers Were Forced to Foot It to the Pavonia Ferry.

ALL TRAINS ARE DELAYED.

Tracks Not Cleared Until 10.30, and Patrons of the Road Had Many Unkind Things to Say About the Company.

There was an accident this morning in the yard of the Erie Railroad just east of the Bergen tunnel, which delayed traffic on the incoming tracks for an hour or more. Two engines came together in a head-on collision, and one of them was derailed and badly wrecked.

One was attached to the Hackensack train on the New Jersey and New York Railroad, which is a branch of the Erie. After the train got through the Bergen tunnel and when a short distance east of the tunnel and running into the yard, the locomotive, from some cause, ran off the track. A yard engine which was approaching on another track crashed into the other engine with much force.

Nobody was hurt, but owing to the accident thousands of commuters, including many women and children, were forced to walk from East Provost street to the Pavonia ferry.

Indignant women, daintily gown, and severe business men, hastening to work, were compelled alike to make their way along the tracks as best they could. A few went back to Pavonia avenue and availed themselves of the street cars, but these were comparatively few in number. Most of them walked, and they talked at the same time.

A few were so unkind as to say rude things about the railroad and even to flout it because of the coal strike.

By 10.30 o'clock the tracks had been cleared, the last of the procession had worked its way into the big ferry house and nothing remained but the faint echoes of the loud and unkind words.

LAURA BIGGAR'S GRIEVANCE OF WOE

Actress, Who Declares She Is Wife of Late Millionaire Bennett, Says She Is Not After Money.

FOR HER CHILDREN'S SAKE.

Whatever Conspiracy There Is in the Matter, She Thinks, Is On the Other Side and She Makes Grave Charges.

That she is not hiding from the Jersey authorities; that her whereabouts are known to them; that she did not at any time want the entire million-dollar estate of Henry M. Bennett, and that the other heirs and not she are the real conspirators, are statements made by Mrs. Laura Biggar Bennett, as she calls herself, in the first interview she has given since she fled from Bayonne on learning that a warrant charging conspiracy had been issued against her. She insists that her intention was not to grab the Bennett estate, but to get on record under oath the fact of her marriage to the dead millionaire, and this solely to establish the legitimacy of the baby now dead and save from disgrace her fourteen-year-old son. She said:

"No One Would Believe Me."
"My only object in beginning the legal proceedings was to establish my marriage to Mr. Bennett, my right to his name and the legitimacy of the child, now dead, that I bore after his death."

My chief object in this was to save my boy from the disgrace which might otherwise attach to him if it were believed that Mr. Bennett and myself were not man and wife. For my own sake, also, I wished my neighbors to know the truth and realize that I might stand on the housetops and proclaim my marriage, but that no one would believe me unless the facts were backed up by legal proof.

"But as soon as Mr. Stanton had sworn in court that he had married me and after Dr. Hendrick had sworn to the birth of our child, I directed my lawyers to drop the matter, and tell the court that I had no objection to the will and that I desired to drop all proceedings and the effect that it was at this point that the other side began to cry conspiracy."

"Let me tell you where the real conspiracy lies. A certain lawyer interested against me took Mr. Stanton out a few days ago, told him that he thought a great deal of me, got him partially under the influence of liquor and then offered him $10,000 to make a false confession to the effect that he had lied when he said he married Mr. Bennett and myself."

Stanton Rejected the Offer.
"Mr. Stanton is a poor man and you can see what a temptation such an offer would be. This lawyer even produced a blank marriage certificate and tried to get Mr. Stanton to fill it out for the purpose of showing that it was a bogus certificate. Mr. Stanton tore it into bits."

"And now let me tell you about my marriage. I had known Mr. Bennett for twelve years. He had come to see me play and tried to make love to me many times, but he had a wife living and I refused his advances. Two months after his wife died he came to me and asked me to marry him. He said that he had fallen in love with me when he first saw me and that now that he was a free man he wanted to marry me. I was a very poor girl and he was a man of many admirable qualities. He was mixed in with his faults, and after I had considered the matter carefully I agreed to marry him. We drove to Justice Stanton's house and he married us."

"I should have greatly preferred to have the marriage made public at that time, but Mr. Bennett was afraid that it would cause a scandal and much criticism, because his wife had been dead so short a time. He made me promise to keep the marriage secret."

"I have kept my promise to you," he said to me. "Now, if you must keep the promise you have made to me."

"He was a remarkable man in many ways, a man of great force and violent temper, and nearly every one was afraid of him. I was afraid of him, myself. I have seen him sit at the dinner table with his head bowed as if in thought, and when the servant came in with a plate of food he would look at it and his look would so frighten her that she would drop the plate. He was very profane at times, particularly when he was confined to his bed. When he would start in to swear, I'd close the door and say to him: 'Now, you go ahead, papa, and ease your mind, but try and get it over with before any of the servants come down.'"

HANNA REVISES HIS PLANS.
Illness Compels Him to Alter Campaign Itinerary.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 13.—Senator Hanna, who was taken ill at Ironton, O., on Saturday while on a speaking tour, and compelled to return home, was at his office to-day and feeling much better. The Senator expects to resume his trip on Wednesday next, speaking at Xenia, O., probably on Wednesday evening.

As a result of his illness, the Senator will be compelled to omit a part of his points, including Norwalk, Findlay, Lima and Piquette, from his itinerary. It also will be necessary to revise his itinerary in Indiana next week.

Senator Hanna said to-day that he had been scheduled to make twenty-four speeches in two days in that State. Owing to his illness, he said, he would be unable to fulfill all of these engagements.

MAY EXTEND STRIKE.
OMAHA, Oct. 13.—Thomas Wilson, Fourth Vice-President of the International Association of Machinists, stated to-day that the strike of shopmen, now being conducted by him against the Union Pacific Railroad, may be carried to all of the Harriman lines.

PARIS CARTOONIST'S IDEA OF MASCAGNI.

HIS OWN CHISEL PERCED HEART. FOR 22 YEARS.

Bursting Emery Wheel Turned Tool with Which He Worked Upon an Ill-Fated Russian.

Isaac Price, a Russian employed in the umbrella-handle factory of Berkeon Bros. at No. 215 Grand street, was instantly killed while at work to-day by a most extraordinary accident.

Price was sharpening a one-inch chisel on an emery wheel one foot in diameter. The wheel was revolving at the rate of some thousands of revolutions a minute toward the man as he held the chisel with its edge from him on the surface of the wheel. Suddenly the wheel broke into several pieces, which went flying all over the shop.

In some unexplained manner the chisel was snatched from Price's hands, sharpened and turned around, and driven with tremendous force into the man's heart. He fell to the floor without a groan, and as he fell the chisel dropped from the wound and a small column of blood spurted into the air.

Abraham Schwartz and Adam Linkowski, two fellow workmen, and Henry Berkson, a member of the firm, were almost instantly at the man's side, but he was dead even before they reached him. A policeman sent in a call to St. Vincent's Hospital and Dr. Donovan made a useless but successful trip to the factory. Coroner's Physician Dr. O'Hanlon viewed the body and issued a permit for its removal.

The dead man lived at 201 Henry street with his wife and children.

HELD FOR MURDER FOR A FEW HOURS. HAYTIE REBELS SINK GUNBOAT.

Dockenmayer Died Suddenly After Quarrel—Examination Proved Assailants Guiltless.

John Strak, Michael Box and John O'Hare, all of Evergreen, L. I., were held without bail for examination for a few hours to-day on a charge of murder by Magistrate Healey in the Flushing Police Court.

They engaged in a drunken quarrel with August Dockenmayer, a fellow laborer for Contractor John Nestlin, of No. 128 Cypress avenue, Evergreen, L. I.

Samuel Ryder, a witness, says Dockenmayer threw bricks at the other three and one of them knocked him unconscious with a blow of his fist.

Warden de Bragga, of Queens County Jail, who was passing, resuscitated the man, who was able to walk away. He returned, however, and was found dead in the Nestlin stables later.

After an examination Coroner Roubert reported that Dockenmayer had not been killed by a blow, but that his death was natural. Magistrate Healey then ordered the release of the three men whom he had ordered held a short time before.

THE CYMRIC ARRIVES.

Kept at Quarantine All Night—Martin Harvey Aboard.

The White Star liner Cymric came up to her pier this morning after being kept at Quarantine all last night. Among the passengers was Martin Harvey, the well known English actor, with a retinue of "man servants" and his "The Only Way" company. Marcus Mayer met Mr. Harvey as he came on the steamship and told him not to talk to reporters until late in the afternoon, when he said the newspapers would give his arrival a great deal more space.

Upon hearing this, Mr. Harvey could not be induced to say a word.

In the company that arrived besides Mr. Harvey were William Hayland, Fuller Mellich, Frederick Wright, Percy Anetey, Frederick Powell, A. B. True, son M. Sherbrooke, M. J. Lewis, John Alexander, George Cooke, J. E. Carson, Edmund Grace, Percy Broad, Frank B. O'Neill, Mrs. B. de Sola, Mrs. Frederick Powell, Mrs. Fuller Mellich, the Misses N. de Silva, Amy Colridge, B. Elder, M. Coleman and E. V. Mellich.

SKULL FRACTURED FOR 22 YEARS.

Hospital Surgeons Soon Discover Why Charles Pullis, Accountant, Was Stricken.

Surgeons in Christ's Hospital on Jersey City Heights found to-day that Charles Pullis, an expert accountant, in the employ of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railway, had been suffering for twenty-two years with a fractured skull and that all that time he had received no inconvenience from it until a few days ago.

Pullis complained last week of pains in his head, and to-day, while at work, he fell unconscious from his chair. He was taken at once to the hospital and it was noticed that there was a scar and a perceptible swelling over the right eye. Investigation revealed an old fracture of the frontal bone, which had caused a piece of the skull to press upon the brain. An operation was performed and the injured man will probably recover.

Recorder Frank Pullis, of North Bergen, who is a brother of the injured man, when told of his brother's condition, said he remembered the accident which had caused the trouble. When his brother was eight years old he was playing with some boys, one of whom threw a rock which struck Charles Pullis over the eye. Little was thought of it at the time and no knowledge of the fracture was gained until to-day.

It is reported that the gunboat's crew was drowned.

The Firminists (revolutionists) at Limbe are maintaining the advantage which they recently gained by defeating General Nord, the Government commander, in skirmishes which have taken place since then. It is again reported that General Nord is short of ammunition.

MASCAGNI LET THE SOUP COOL.

Composer Kept 150 of His Countrymen Waiting Five Hours to Dine with Him.

Mascagni, the musical genius from Italy, the "man of the intermezzo," kept 150 of his fellow-countrymen waiting five hours for their dinner yesterday, at what was termed a "special banquet to Pietro Mascagni."

Gathering about the banquet hall door the members eagerly awaited the hour of 1. When it was at hand, however, it was found that Mascagni was not in sight.

Prof. Sanna said: "I will send word to let him know that we are waiting." And he did. There came a telephone message from the Metropolitan Opera House saying: "Sig. Mascagni is busy directing a dress rehearsal and cannot come just yet. He presents his compliments and asks his friends to indulge him with one hour's delay."

President Sanna smiled and said, "Why, certainly we'll wait." Others acquiesced less gracefully. They had skipped breakfast for the 1 o'clock banquet.

Three o'clock passed, 4 o'clock came, 5 o'clock sounded from the big clock in the hall and the diminished forces of the Mascagni Society voted unanimously that if Mascagni didn't show up within half an hour they would go right in and eat the food themselves.

Fully Mascagni. He was tired, but his blue eyes lightened when President Sanna made a speech praising him and saying all sorts of nice things about Italy and Italian musicians.

"I am not here to post as the 'man of the intermezzo,' but for the purpose of standing upon the shoulders of great Italian composers and illustrating, as far as I can, what Italy has really done for the musical world."

STORM AND COLD WAVE DUE HERE.

Drop of Twenty Degrees Is Predicted to Follow Warm Weather Brought by Storm.

A storm of more or less severity is due to strike this city by to-morrow. The storm is coming east from the Dakotas and is caused by a reactionary move of the excessively warm wave in the Southern part of the country.

New York is to have a touch of the biting cold a trifle earlier this year than last, as the storm, which was central over New Mexico Sunday, cannot, it is said, be diverted before reaching this city. The city to-day is under the influence of a Gulf Stream area of rare warmth for this time of year.

A drop of from fifteen to twenty degrees is predicted if this city comes under the full scope of the storm, while there is a possibility of the storm effecting New York only as a "tail-end," with slight cyclonic conditions.

The following telegram was received at the Weather Bureau this morning from Washington:

"Southwestern storm signals are displayed along the Atlantic coast from the Delaware Breakwater to New York. The storm over northeastern Michigan is moving northeast with unusual energy. High south to west winds this afternoon and to-night along the middle Atlantic coast. Rain to-night."
